SCIENCE & SCRIPTURE: OF COURSE THEY AGREE!

In the last article we discovered an amplified interpretation of Chapter 1 verses 1&2 of the Biblical book we know as Genesis. In this article we will discuss further about the Moses Phenomenon; what he wrote in those two verses and what it really means to us today.

Moses wrote in these two verses about how: God selected the heavens and the world. These elements must be summoned up from nothingness prior to being selected, because the word "create" in the Hebrew means "select." In any case God must not have considered it relevant otherwise he would have revealed more about it. Also, as best I can tell there is no word for "making something from nothing." We also learned that the heavens were the lofty area above the ground and it was the area where the clouds move. We find out that the earth was in an active and chaotic state; unable to sustain life and Moses mentions the face of the earth was turning. Finally, the supreme God violently breathes on the world jump-starting the earth and its atmosphere into a life-sustaining habitat.

The Moses Phenomenon is a unique writing throughout the whole world and in all of history because of two simple reasons: First, what he wrote was based on inspiration not knowledge. As we will learn later; Moses' background suggest that he was taught by the finest educators in the Egyptian culture, and those teachings were contrary to his inspired writings of the God he came to serve. Second, today he is proven to be correct in his writings concerning the heavens and the earth, the order in which life develops and civilizations historic documentation.

Unlike science of any period, which does their best to speculate (or suppose) as accurately as possible, through analysis, observation and mathematic calculations; Moses wrote about creation because, according to his own admission, he was ordered by God to do it! Furthermore, he knew nothing about what he was going to write; God would supply him the information.

We learn about Moses background through the scripture themselves along with archeological confirmation. Moses teaches us that Pharaoh adopted him when the Hebrews were in captivity. His mother put him in a raft made of straw and sent him down the Nile to escape the wrath of pharaoh: The same pharaoh he would later become son and heir to. Moses is trained by the finest teachers the Egyptian culture could muster. Since Egypt was among the most powerful nations of the world his education was considerable.

We know today through archeology that many clay tablets discovered in Egypt revealed belief systems of their people, politics and teachings: all of them immersed in a pantheon of more than two thousand gods. It is here that Moses was raised and taught. However, Moses completely separated himself from these teachings and belief systems and abandoned them for what he experienced and determined to be a better belief system; and why not he spoke face to face with the supreme God.

The point is this: If we were to compare the beliefs of the Hebrews to that of the Egyptians you would clearly see the differences in doctrines. Not to mention that Egyptian doctrines have been proven to break down in the light of logic, truth and science, where Moses' doctrine is upheld and proven accurate under the same scrutiny.

Is this important to us today? Yes. Why? Because today, science is more and more finding out about the planet in which we live. In "Earth Story" we see that the first two days of creation are quite accurate. I believe this is what the supreme God was trying to display in Moses writings. Moses had to be provided accurate information from an outside source (God) to get the story right, to get the order of creation correct, and to reference the face of the earth as turning. How would he know? He couldn't unless it was revealed to him supernaturally. However, the greatest reason I can think of, as to why this is important is this: all through the ages, God used intellect, logic and faith to teach us to believe in Him. He uses prophecy (the telling of future events) and he uses word of knowledge (the telling of truths not yet discovered) to prove Himself to us.

These are Gods tools to show us that He exists beyond our realm. These are the truths that we have to hold on to. These are the truths that we can put confidence in when it comes to trusting the supreme God. We see in writings how God loved Moses. God claimed there would never be another like Moses. This is how we become friends with God, too, by believing these truths.
